

UNITED NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR REFUGEES

REFUGEES by numbers 2002

INTRODUCTION

At the start of 2002 the number of people ‘of concern’ to UNHCR was 19.8 million—roughly one out of every 300 persons on Earth—compared with 21.8 million a year earlier.

The overall decrease of two million people reflected two conflicting trends: huge groups fleeing their homes during the year, but even greater numbers of uprooted persons returning from exile.

As conflict continued to grip many parts of the world, nearly 200,000 Afghans joined 3.5 million countrymen already living abroad as refugees, 188,000 Africans fled to neighboring countries as did 93,000 citizens of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM). An additional 511,000 civilians became ‘internally displaced persons’ (so-called IDPs) within Afghanistan, 190,500 in Colombia and 112,000 in Liberia.

However, there were also encouraging developments. More than one million Eritrean, 80,000 Bosnian and 42,000 Burundi IDPs went home as did 267,000 African refugees and an estimated 160,000 FYROM citizens. There was a decrease of 700,000 so-called stateless persons, mainly in the countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and the number of refugees returning home but still needing assistance almost halved from nearly 800,000 in 2000 to 462,700 in 2001.

The number of people seeking asylum worldwide dropped slightly during the reporting period, from 1,092,000 in 2000 to 923,000 in 2001 with the majority of claimants coming from countries such as Afghanistan, Iraq, Turkey, Yugoslavia and China.

The main host countries remained unchanged, with Pakistan sheltering 2.2 million persons, Iran 1.9 million and Germany 988,500.

Who does UNHCR help and how?

UNHCR provides protection and assistance not only to refugees, but also to other categories of displaced or needy persons. These include asylum seekers, refugees who have returned home but still need help in rebuilding their lives, local civilian communities which are directly affected by the movements of refugees and, perhaps most importantly, growing numbers of internally displaced persons (IDPs). These are people who have been forced to flee their homes, but who have not reached a neighboring country and therefore, unlike refugees, are not protected by international law or eligible to receive many types of aid. As the nature of war has changed in the last few decades, with more and more internal conflicts replacing interstate wars, the number of IDPs has increased significantly and they are now the second largest group of concern to UNHCR. The special U.N. Representative for Internally Displaced Persons estimates there are between 20-25 million IDPs worldwide, with major concentrations in Sudan, Angola, Colombia, Democratic Republic of Congo, Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Bosnia-Herzegovina and countries of the former Soviet Union. UNHCR helps an estimated 5.3 million of these people.

Refugees: 12 million

UNHCR's founding mandate defines refugees as persons who are outside their country and cannot return owing to a well-founded fear of persecution because of their race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership of a particular social group. Regional instruments such as the 1969 Organization of African Unity Refugee Convention and the 1984 Cartagena Declaration in Latin America expanded that mandate to include persons who have fled because of war or civil conflict. A total of 144 countries have signed the 1951 Geneva Refugee Convention and/or its 1967 Protocol and recognize persons as refugees based on the definitions contained in this and the regional instruments. Figures used by UNHCR are based on these definitions and include persons in Europe and other areas of the world who have been allowed to stay for humanitarian reasons and those who have been granted 'temporary protection' on a group basis.

Returnees: 462,700

The majority of refugees prefer to and do return home as soon as circumstances permit, generally when a conflict has ended, a degree of stability has been restored and basic infrastructure is being rebuilt. UNHCR encourages voluntary repatriation as the best solution for displaced persons. The agency often provides transportation and a start-up package which could include cash grants and practical assistance such as farm tools and seeds. On occasion, it extends this help to include the rebuilding of homes, schools, clinics and roads. Field staff monitor the well-being of 'returnees' in delicate situations. The duration of such activities varies, but rarely lasts longer than two years when longer-term development assistance from other organizations is more appropriate. In the latest reporting period, the number of people needing help dropped by nearly one-half, from 786,000 in 2000 to 462,700. Statistics on number of returnees reflect the number of persons going home during a 12-month period.

Resettlement:

Some refugees cannot or are unwilling to return home, usually because they would face continued persecution. In such circumstances, UNHCR helps to find them new homes, either in the asylum country where they are living or in third countries where they can be permanently resettled. Though many nations have agreed to accept refugees on a temporary basis during the early phases of a crisis, only 17 nations worldwide now participate in official resettlement programs and accept quotas of refugees on an annual basis.

MAIN COUNTRIES OF RESETTLEMENT OF REFUGEES [in 2001]

United States	68,400
Canada	12,200
Australia	6,500
Norway	1,300
Sweden	1,100
New Zealand	760
Finland	740
Netherlands	630
Denmark	530

Asylum seekers: 940,800

When people flee their own country and seek sanctuary in a second state, they apply for 'asylum'—the right to be recognized as bona fide refugees and receive the legal protection and material assistance that status implies. Approximately 923,000 people applied for asylum worldwide in 2001 compared to just over 1,092,000 in 2000, the majority coming from countries such as Afghanistan, Iraq, Turkey, Yugoslavia, China, Democratic Republic of Congo, Colombia, Russian Federation, Somalia and Iran. The number of asylum seekers whose cases were still pending at the end of the year was 940,800 compared to 900,700 at the beginning of 2001.

In the last five decades, several million people were granted asylum but because of such huge numbers and the increasing ease of travel and communication some states worked to 'harmonize' or toughen their domestic refugee legislation and asylum criteria, sometimes resulting in a decrease in recognition rates.

During the 1990s Balkan crises and subsequent emergencies, when millions of people fled their homes, UNHCR recognized the outflow of such large numbers could overwhelm the asylum process in receiving countries. The agency suggested a simpler and faster process of offering the arrivals 'temporary protection' insisting, however, that asylum remained the cornerstone of its mandate to protect refugees.

IDPs and Others of Concern: 6.3 million

UNHCR extends protection or assistance to certain groups who were not included in the Office's original mandate, but whom the U.N. Secretary-General or the U.N. General Assembly have requested the agency to assist. They include certain groups of war-affected populations, 'stateless' citizens of the former Soviet Union who have not been able to obtain the nationality of any of the new countries which emerged after the dissolution of the USSR, and an estimated 5.3 million internally displaced persons. These so-called IDPs are the fastest-growing group of uprooted persons in the world. Because they, in effect, 'fall between the cracks' of current humanitarian law and assistance, a widespread international debate has been underway for several years on how best to help all IDPs and who should be responsible for their well-being.

The number of IDPs of concern to UNHCR dropped by more than 800,000 during the year, but this overall figure reflected two opposing trends. Well over one million mainly Eritreans, Bosnians and Burundis returned home, but on the downside 511,000 more Afghans and 190,500 Colombians, among others, were newly uprooted, bringing the total of displaced persons in those two countries alone to nearly two million.

Afghanistan	1,200,000

Sri Lanka	683,300
Azerbaijan	573,000
Russian Federation	443,300

NOTE: The figures included here do not necessarily represent the total number of IDPs in the countries concerned.

Numbers at a glance

- At the start of the year 2002, the number of people of concern to UNHCR was 19.8 million. They included 12 million refugees (61%), 940,800 asylum seekers (5%), 462,700 returned refugees (3%), 5.3 million internally displaced persons (25%), 241,000 returned IDPs (1%) and 1 million others of concern (5%).
- The figure of 19.8 million uprooted persons was a fall of two million compared with the previous year and reflected two conflicting trends: while large groups of people continued to be uprooted, even larger numbers, especially IDPs, returned home.
- The global refugee population of 12 million remained virtually unchanged from the previous year, with half a million people fleeing their countries during 2001 and nearly as many going home.
- At the end of 2001, Asia hosted the largest refugee population (48.3%), followed by Africa (27.5%), Europe (18.3%) North America (5%), Oceania (0.6%) and Latin America and the Caribbean (0.3%).
- When all persons of concern to UNHCR are included, Asia hosted 44.6%, Africa 21.1%, Europe 24.6%, North America 5.5%, Latin America and the Caribbean 3.8% and Oceania 0.4%.
- During 2001, nearly 500,000 refugees returned to their home country. Almost 100,000 refugees were resettled in 2001, including around 30,000 people assisted by UNHCR, a 25% agency decrease compared to 2000.
- Currently, an estimated 7.7 million people under UNHCR's care are children below the age of 18. The percentage of children compared with the overall refugee population ranges from 57 percent in Central Africa to 20 percent in Central and Eastern Europe.
- Refugees above 60 years of age constitute more than 15 percent of the refugee population in Eastern Europe and the Balkans, whereas in Africa they generally represent less than 5 percent of the refugee population.
- In most regions, women and girls of all ages constitute between 45-55 percent of the refugee population.
- The number of asylum applications submitted in 30, mostly industrialized countries rose from 570,100 in 2000 to 614,100 in 2001. The 7.2% increase was largely because of a higher number of applications in North America and Central Europe. The number of applications in the European Union fell 2 % from 391,460 to 384,530.
- Compared to the size of the national population, the main refugee hosting countries during 2001 were Armenia, with 70 refugees per 1,000 inhabitants, followed by Congo (40 per 1,000), Yugoslavia (38 per 1,000), Djibouti (37 per 1,000) and Zambia (27 per 1,000).
